

Food Web of the Compost Pile

Composting is a biological process that requires food (organic materials), water and air. Composting involves a wide variety of organisms which are naturally present in our environment.

The compost pile is really a teeming microbial farm.

